- St. Helena Hospital (System No. 2800625) –
  - The turbidity of sources was investigated and found to be minimal. The main turbidity problems are associated with their storage tanks. The main cause of turbidity problems is associated with their storage tanks. Tank cleaners are coming today to address this issue. New damage \(9/1\) to waterline will need to replace 1,000 feet of pipe. Will need temporary storage tank during replacement.
- City of Napa (System No. 2810003): UPDATE: Reports of 8 water leaks that will be addressed by staff on Tuesday 9/2/14.
- It was strongly recommended that those parts of the distribution system where significant damage has occurred because of the earthquake be fully replaced in order to ensure a reliable water system going forward.
- Particularly important in at least two areas: (1) the reservoir "B" tank and (2) distribution system pipelines in locations where multiple breaks have occurred.

The infrastructure above was installed from the 1930s to the 1960s. The impact of the earthquake on the aging infrastructure will likely result in ongoing distribution failures that may compromise the safety and integrity of the water system in the future if left with interim fixes.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

High pressure over the region will give way today to a low pressure trough moving into the Pacific Northwest. Some form of the trough will linger over the region for the rest of the 7 day period. Conditions will remain dry with rather low afternoon relative humidity expected. Overnight thermal belt conditions are also likely with mid and upper slopes seeing relatively poor to only moderate relative humidity recovery in the dry air mass. There will be a slight cooling trend today and Wednesday, then temperatures will hold a few degrees above seasonal normals for the rest of the 7 day period. This will put the warmest inland valleys into the mid 90's. Winds tonight and Wednesday will become northerly and breezy (6-15 mph) for the northern third of the Geographic Area in particular. Otherwise winds will generally be fairly light or of seasonable speeds, with periods mainly overnight north to northeast off shore flow (mostly 5-12 mph (locally stronger and gusty). The marine layer near the coast will have a tendency to persist, although afternoon clearing to the beaches is also likely on many days. Areas that end up with offshore winds overnight may even clear at night.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A trough will slowly edge into the area this week, bringing cooler, onshore flow to the region. Temperatures today will be 5-8 degrees cooler than over the weekend, especially across the inland valleys. By Wednesday and Thursday, temperatures will be a couple of degrees below normal with highs in the upper 80's to lower 90's in the valleys. Marine layer coverage will increase through the first half of the week and night through morning stratus may reach the lower slopes below 3,500 feet by Wednesday morning. Southwest winds will increase as the trough draws closer and some wind gusts to 30 mph will be possible across the Antelope Valley, Apple Valley and over Canyon Country during the afternoon hours through Thursday. Wednesday and Thursday, wind gusts to 40 mph will be likely in the Banning Pass and northern Coachella Valley. Warmer weather is expected to return by Friday into next weekend. Some moisture may creep into the far eastern deserts by Saturday, allowing isolated storms to develop near the Arizona border. No strong offshore winds or significant thunderstorm activity is expected the next 7 days.
